COMMENT OF THE DAY

Time To Call A Halt

TT is rather remarkable that, at a time when political expediency should keep them hard at the task of exploiting. seeming schisms in the Labour Party, the Conservatives should themselves appear to be distracted by dissensions within. No great attention would have been attracted except that, once again, it is Tory leadership which is under attack. And it takes an unexpectedly new form in the sense that Mr Anthony Eden is coupled with Mr Churchill in what may be termed mutinous complaints. Murmurings in the past have generally been unflatteringly concentrated against Mr Churchill, with certain of the Tory back-benchers openly advocating the need for swifter succession of Mr Eden to the leadership of Party affairs. Internal dissatisfaction at the moment, not surprisingly perhaps, arises from the Persian oil crisis and from what is apparently regarded as too! close: alignment by the Tory hierarchy with the Labour Government's disinclination to force the issue in Teheran. There may be something paradoxical in the fact that any Conservative section should accuse Mr Churchill of showing insufficient firmness of purpose, either in foreign or domestic affairs, but there is plain evidence that the restraint that has been shown since the beginning of the oil crisis has made the flag-waving group extremely restless. Both Mr Eden and the Leader of the Opposition adopted the same tone of patience after Mr Morrison's latest statement on the Persian situation. Shortly afterwards, the identical declaration presented in the Lords was very differently received by Lord Salisbury, leader in the Upper House. Although Lord Salisbury had taken part with Mr Churchill and Mr Eden in the private conversations with the Prime Minister, housed phraseology strongly suggesting that his personal views were closer to those of the back-bencher critics than to those on the Front Benches. It is, of course, conceivable that he was revealing in public what the Tory leaders had put to Mr Attlee in private, but nevertheless a disturbing impression was left of differences of opinion both in the higher and lower ranks of the Party. One suggestion is 'that Mr Churchill has been stung by Socialist attempts to brand him as a warmonger. But it is one thing to accuse him of leaning too far backwards in order to avoid a damaging electoral label and quite another to charge him with caring too little about British prestige or interests. What Mr Churchill would have done had he been in control six months ago cannot be judged now, outside the realms of conjecture. It can, however, be presumed that if he now trends carefully, it is because of necessity. Today's task is to discover, at this late hour, how much can be saved out of the wreck which bad handling has made of a once substantial British asset. Moreover, he clearly holds to the traditional view that it is not for an Opposition, when not possessed of all the relevant information, to counsel major interventionist action. Such counsel is not always wise on strategic. grounds and seldom wise on political grounds. Military intervention, to be effective, should -have been -entered . upon months ago had the vital factors supported its wisdom and success. But a threat which might earlier have brought the Persians to reason would today be hopelessly unrealistic and almost certainly would apply the match to an explosive situation. Even so, Mr Eden's sharp challenge to Mr Morrison on the Empire Roach incident indicates. that Tory patience is rapidly on the wane. The time to take a stand is overdue if Britain is to counteract the ill effects of past weakness in the Middle

Catalogue Of Soviet Sins Against 'True' Communism

A catalogue of the Soviet sins against genuine Communism as the Yugoslavs see it is contained in a statement by Mijalko Todorovich, Mar-

In 1950, for example, the U.S.S.R. harvested 124 million tons of the five main food grains, wheat, rye, barley, oats and maize. She produced nearly 28 million tons of crude steel, 204 million tons of coal, 38 million tone of oil and sho generated 87 billion kilowatt hours of electricity.

Her total output is still panding. Last year she claimed to produce 57 percent more coal than she did in 1940, 20 per-cent more petrol and 130 per-cent more engineering products. If the index figure for her industial production in 1940 be taken to be 100, the appropriate figure for 1950 would be 173.

They cannot be taken quite as they stand. Certain adjust-ments must be made to bring them on to the same basis Western statistics.

Nevertheless, when all cor-rections have been made, the production of the Soviet Union remains very large, Allowing for the fact that, if her rulers so wish, an extremely high proportion of her national output can be used for war, Russia's production is sufficient to make her a very formidable opponent

This having been recognised, however, the really significant truth about the Russian economy is not how much it produces, but how little.

Russia, with her ore mountains and her years of concentration on heavy industry, produces less than twice as much steel as Britain and only about one-third of America's output. Her coal production even including inferior coal outstrips Britain's alone by only 45,000 tons a year.

The Soviet method of estimating agricultural yields makes no allowance for losses in harvesting and threshing. The figures therefore look good. But when the normal allowances for losses, which the rest of the world makes, are applied to the Soviet figures, it is evident that the Russian agricultural system today produces no more cereals per head than Czarist agriculture did.

There is reason, too, to suspoet that in Soviet industry the life-time of industrial plants and machinery is comparatively short. Blast furnaces, steel works and the like seem to last only about half the time that they do in Britain or the United

One result of this is that the planned economy in spite of every attempt has never been able to produce the consumer goods it wants and needs. Too much effort has been required for heavy industry.

Not efficient

The shortage of consumer goods has been one factor in causing the normal system of incentives to be so ineffective that in order to keep production up, more and more reliance has had to be placed upon Stakhanovism and upon compulsion.

Stakhanovism has produced quantity at the expense of quality, so that Quality Brigades have had to be introduced to cut down waste and shoddy out-

Compulsion-along with political dictatorship - has produced forced labour. This has now become an essential part of the Soviet economy. It is relied upon to produce a steadily growing part of the national construction of strategic roads, canals and factories.

This forced labour cannot be. efficient. For one thing, it does not get enough to cat. It is therefore a grave flaw in Russin's economic strength, and it introduces a vicious circle. As time goes on, more and more forced labour has to be used to get the same results. So the flow is increased and is, indeed, self-perpetuating.

Considerations such as these do not mean that Russia is weak but only that she is weaker than she need have been had she chosen to live under a different political and economic system.

The lesson

would be folly to assume that the Russian economy as it is organised today could not launch a total war. It certainly could. If Russia started a war would have the initiative an unrivalled power of concentrating energy on her side. These are great advantages, Against unwary opponents they might give her

But against a Western world For the West, therefore, thu lesson to be drawn from any study of the Russian economy is the simple Boy Scout motto, ---"Be prepared."

East just nodded amiably. He knew perfectly well that six spades would have been set. He suspected as much when he bid six spades—but he went shead and bid the slam anyway. The reason was very simple. The bidding of Bouth and North made it perfectly plain that they were determined to play the hand

WADES INTO SUGAR RAY

ROUND-BY-ROUND Randolph Turpin By PETER WILSON

So Randolph Turpin is champion of the world. He out-fought and out-punched Sugar Ray Robinson, of the U.S., coloured holder of the middleweight title, from start to finish at Earl's Court, London.

Referce Eugene Henderson didn't need to think twice before he signalized. "Turpin wins." The boy from Leamington Spa had not lost more than a couple of rounds.

Foreign Buying Of Gold In U.S. Shows Big Drop

Washington, July 18. Foreign purchases of United States gold have dropped sharply after a year-long splurge reduced this country's reserves by more than $2,500,000,-

The Treasury reported today that the second quarter of this year's net sales of gold to foreign governments totalled only $55,000,000.

United Nations, July 17. The United States gave strong indications today that it is going to ask the UN to do something about world-wide monopolies in wool and

Accused Man's Crass Stupidity UTTERED LETTERS WITH MENACES

Describing accused's act as one of crass stupidity. Mr A. J. Clifford (instructed by Mr I. W. Gunter) pleaded for leniency on behalf of Li Chi-man, 20, indicted on two counts of uttering letters demanding money with menaces, before the Senior Pulane Judge, Mr Justice Gould, in the Sessions Criminal morning.

Li was accused of uttering a letter demanding HK$500 from Chung Kam-sim, with menaces, on March 2, 1951, and of uttering another letter demanding US$5,000, also from Chung, on March 13, 1951. Li pleaded guilty to the indictments.

Complainant took the letters to the Police and on their instructions enclosed the money demanded and left it at the desired place. Complainant stood beside the paper basket, but no one approached him.

Another appointment was made and this time accused came along and picked up the basket. He was arrested in the act of doing so, Counsel sald. At the police station, accused admitted writing the letters. He said he was 'in adverse eincumstances and had no work.

LENIENCY PLEA

Before pleading for leniency on behalf of the accused. Mr Clifford called accused's younger sister, Li Choy-hing, married woman, to testify to his character.

Li said they lived together in Amoy before coming to mally good and quite intelligent.
He had never been in trouble before. She would have helped by the before. She would have helped by the before around to become an ordinary able to thrust people across the his life.

The conclusion he came to insugate the offence the of him had he appealed to her for assistance.

Pleading in mitigation, Mr Cilford said that this was not the usual type of demanding money with menaces inasmuch as it was a case of youthful stupidity. Accused got into financial troubles and instead of going to his sister for help thought he could out of them by attempting to get money from the rich father of a person he knew. This, Counsel described was crass stupidity on the part of the accused. How unprofessional and stupld was accused was apparent in his attitude. First he wrote the letters himself, secondly he did everything himself, that was, collecting the money, etc. and when he was Counsel said that the letters revealed schoolboy nonsense.

Language Why we say The Davil to Pay.

The full expression used to be "the devil to pay and no pitch hot." It was an old scafaring phrase — "pay" and "devil", being seamen's slang-words.

Living

To "pay" a boat means to make it watertight with hot pitch. The "devil" is the seam most awkward to "pay"-that is, the one running along the waterline. So when a sailor found his mate had let the pitch grow cold when water-proofing a boat, he had every right to fly in a rage. For his mate, in fact, there was "the -devil to pay."
